Theme Verse for 2009

"For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Timothy 4:8

Loving Memory of Filial Son

Living near my home was a boy fifteen years of age who went to work late one morning. He would have been on time had he remembered, as he was running to catch the last car that could bring him to the town, that he had forgotten to kiss his mother good-bye. He let the car go, went home again and tenderly kissed his mother.

In the awful fire on Lincoln street, he was killed. When she looked into his face a few hours afterward, and kissed his cold lips, there was no response. But there was a sweet memory that softened the deep sorrow. It was the recollection of that last kiss upon which his affectionate heart had put such a premium. And all through the lingering years of that mother's life, her boy will return to her every morning and kiss her again. The broken heart will be healed, and by-and-by she will look forward and wait and long and pray, for the first kiss in the "The far-away home of the soul," where the good-bye is never spoken. There is a lesson in this for you, dear friend. Take it to your heart.

How Washington was Blessed

George Washington, when quite young, was about to go to sea as a midshipman. Everything was in readiness. His trunk had been taken on board the boat; and he went to bid his mother farewell, when he saw tears filling her eyes. Seeing her distress, he turned to the servant, and said, "Go, and tell them to fetch my trunk back. I will not go away to break my mother's heart." His mother struck with his decision said to him, "George, God has promised to bless the children that honor their parents; and I believe he will bless you."

The best monument that a child can raise to his mother's memory is that of a clean, upright life, such as she would have rejoiced to see her son live.
